

List of Figures and Tables

---

Figures

7.1	An example of Karl Pearson's graphical method.	140
7.2	Pearson, 'The Bridge of Life.'	141
8.1	The modern "Constitution" of knowledge (adapted from Latour).	159
9.1	International Phonetic Alphabet.	189
9.2	Positions of tongue pronouncing individual vowels.	190
9.3	Palatograms comparing different articulations of vowels and consonants in Parisian French.	191
9.4	A chart showing the elevations of the tongue when pronouncing different sounds.	192
9.5	The kymograph.	192
9.6	A graph showing sounds with varying wavelengths (and thus pitches).	195
9.7	The first and second tones in mandarin Chinese converted into change in pitch.	195
13.1	Paul A. Anderson in 1924.	285
13.2	Y. M. Hsieh at his desk in Yenching, Oct. 1926.	290
13.3	William Band in traditional Chinese dress standing in apparently his residence at Yenching likely soon after his arrival in China.	296
16.1	A Pictorial Depiction of Kokubu's Class.	356

Tables

5.1	Universities attended by FBAs: first and second BAs	88
5.2	Universities at which FBAs in the sample held professorial chairs	88
5.3	Postgraduate study or training, higher doctorates, honorary degrees, FRSS: Classicists/archaeologists, historians, philosophers in the FBA sample	90
13.1	Yenching physics graduates (BS & MS), 1929–1941	297
13.2	The Physics Departments at Peking, Tsinghua, and Yenching before 1937	303
16.1	Careers of the teaching staff in East Asian History and Ethnology at Taihoku, 1928–1945	344

