

A Different Voice, A Different Song: Reclaiming Community through the Natural Voice and World Song

Caroline Bithell

Print publication date: 2014

Print ISBN-13: 9780199354542

Published to Oxford Scholarship Online: October 2014

DOI: 10.1093/acprof:oso/9780199354542.001.0001

(p.xvii) About the Companion Website

www.oup.com/us/adifferentvoiceadifferentsong

Username: Music3

Password: Book3234

Readers are invited to visit the book's companion website, where they will find a wealth of illustrative materials and additional resources. A wide selection of original colour photographs and video clips serve as illustration for events and practices discussed in detail in the book (see lists on the pages that follow). These are cued in the text with the icons  and  respectively.

The following resources can also be found on the website.

Links to YouTube, Vimeo, and Podcasts

Listed here are links to a further selection of video clips of choir performances posted on YouTube and Vimeo, together with links to short films and trailers referred to in the book. Since it is not possible to vouch for the long-term stability of clips on social media, these are not cued directly in the text although some are referenced in the endnotes.

Who's Who: Practitioners Featured in the Book

This set of sixty-six short biographical entries is provided to help the reader keep track of the part played by individuals who put in more than a fleeting appearance in the book and to point to further information by providing links to personal websites where available.

Community Choirs: Select Webography

Listed here are the websites and blogs of a small but representative selection of choirs from among those featured in the book. These websites carry a range (p.xviii) of materials, which may include photo galleries, sound and video files, repertoire lists, songsheets, events listings and posters, introductions to choir members, short concert reports and testimonials, details of rehearsals and fees, and other practical information for prospective members. Some also include an online shop.

Organisations, Projects, and Events: Webography

This listing provides links to the websites of many of the organisations, projects, and events referred to in the book. These host a range of useful resources, including events listings, databases (of choirs, practitioners, recordings, etc.), newsletters, short films, podcasts, research reports, guidelines, training opportunities, extensive holdings of archival materials, and links to YouTube channels, Facebook, and other social media sites. Some also include an online shop.

Songbooks and Other Resources for Choir Leaders

This listing includes details of a wealth of resources for community choir and workshop leaders, most of which are referred to in the book. These include songbooks, teaching CDs and DVDs, and online resources.

Access brought to you by: